Werther had a love for Charlotte. Such as words can never utter. Would you know how first he met her? She was cutting bread and butter.

Charlotte was a married lady. And a moral man was Werther. And for all the wealth of Indies, Would do nothing for to hurt her.

He sighed and pined and ogled. And his passion boiled and bubbled. Till he blew his silly brains out. And no more by it was troubled.

Charlotte, having seen his body Borne before her on a shutter. Like a well-conducted person. Went on cutting bread and butter. —William Makepeace Thackeray.

Menus for Family

Breakfast—Stewed dried apricots, cereal, the cream, soft-boiled eggs, graham toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Baked onion puff, brown bread and butter sandwiches, whipped fruit jelly, drop cakes, milk, tea.

Dinner—Cream of tomato soup, casserole of vegetables, jellied celery salad, parsnip cakes, prune whip, custard sauce, whole wheat rolls, milk, coffee.

Baked Onion Puff
Six or eight good-sized onions, 3 tablespoons butter, 1½ cups soft brown crumbs, 1½ cup water in which onions were cooked, 1½ cup milk, 3 eggs, salt, paprika.

Cook onions in boiling water to cover until soft. Do not cover sauce pan in which onions are cooked. Drain and rub through a sieve. There should be 1½ cups onion pulp. Melt butter, add bread crumbs and liquid and cook until smooth. Beat yolks of eggs until thick and lemon colored. Add onion pulp to cooked mixture, season with salt and paprika and bring to the boiling point. Remove from the fire and add beaten yolks. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry and fold into mixture. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake 25 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve at once or the "puff" will fall.

Whipped Fruit Jelly
One package prepared gelatin, 2 bananas, 1 orange, ½ cup shredded pineapple, 1 egg, ½ cup powdered sugar, 4 tablespoons granulated sugar, 1 teaspoon flour, 1½ cups milk, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Any preferred flavor of gelatin can be used. Follow directions on package for preparing jelly. When cold, beat with a Dover beater until the jelly begins to foam. Beat white of egg until stiff and dry and beat in the powdered sugar. Beat this into the jelly. Add fruit cut into small pieces and turn into a mold. Set on ice to chill and become firm.

Mix granulated sugar, salt and flour with yolk of egg. When smooth and well blended slowly beat in milk scalded in top of double boiler. Cook over hot water until mixture coats the spoon. Let cool and flavor with vanilla. Serve with the fruit jelly.

Jellied Celery Salad
Two cups chopped celery, 2 cups water, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon paprika, 1 cup diced celery leaves, ½ cup nut meats, ½ cup mayonnaise.

The coarse outer stalks and leaves of the celery are used for the chopped celery. Simmer celery, onion and salt in water for 15 minutes. Add water to keep two cups over vegetables. Strain and add gelatin. Soften in cold water, sugar and lemon juice. When beginning to jelly add diced celery, nuts and mayonnaise. Turn into individual molds and place on ice to chill and become firm. Serve on a bed of lettuce with mayonnaise and garnish with strips of pimiento.

Musical Was Most Enjoyable

The Sterling Gazette of last evening says: The lovely spring sunshine and the announced program encouraged an unusually large attendance at the Sterling Women's Club, Saturday, April 4. The Easter attire of the members added to the brightness of the occasion.

Aside from the routine business, the club voted to endorse a resolution and sign a petition presented by Mrs. Bowman. These had been initiated by the Peoria Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The petition will be presented to the Judicial Committee of the House, asking them to endorse an amendment to the State Constitution giving the privilege of reading the Bible without comment, in the public schools, when desired.

Announcement was made of the Women's World Fair in Chicago, April 18 to 25, when the railroads make a rate of one and a half cents fare. Mrs. Collins Dysart read an interesting article, entitled, "When Mrs. George Washington Went to Camp," and Mrs. Willard Thompson gave an article, by Mrs. Stanforth, National Registrar, "Genealogical Gleanings." Miss Fannie Murphy presented the subject, in which the Phidians are so interested, "The Civic Music Association."

Most appetizing refreshments were served by the hostesses before their guests departed.

annual club luncheon, Saturday, April 18, at St. John's Lutheran church, for members of the club and out of town guests. Reservations must be made before April 15 with Mrs. W. B. Carolus. An attractive program has been arranged.

The attraction of the afternoon was the notation in the Club Calendar, "Musical, The Coppins Sisters and Mrs. Adolph Eichler, Dixon." Miss Alice Coppins, violinist, Mrs. Adolph Eichler, reader and Eleanor Coppins Chapman, accompanist. They were greeted by an appreciative audience of old friends and new ones, made during their program.

Miss Coppins rendered Heide Kati, by Hubay, Slumber Song, Schubert, Federwiski's Minuet arranged for the violin by Kreider and three of Kreider's compositions, Polichinelle, Londonderry Air and Tambourin Chinois. The pure clear tones leave a pleasant memory and an appreciation of the talent and years of application necessary to reach such a degree of perfection.

The readings by Mrs. Eichler included Aldrich's Miantowana by Makrejs, Apples by Phyllis Forgan, Gossip by Paul Bliss, Witches' Loaves—O'Henry, Papa and the Boy, The Merchant and the Book Agent, and a number of encores. These readings were given in such a pleasing way that the audience could have listened attentively to twice the number. Some of these were given to plans accompaniment.

Eleanor Coppins Chapman bound all the parts of the program together by her sympathetic accompanying.

Opions Differ About Segregating Crime News

By Associated Press Leased Wire

Des Moines, Iowa, April 7—Readers of the Des Moines Register, which yesterday began an experiment in the handling of crime news stories on an inside section, expressed differing opinions on the value of the method. Chief of Police Cavender in answering the experiment, said that segregation of crime news is undoubtedly a forward step, in overcoming the glorifying of crime by under-developed minds.

An opposite view was expressed by a local circus man who said he believed the publication of crime news is helpful and that the "greatest correction of crime is the publicity given it by newspapers."

DISCORD AMONG "RELIGIOUS" PUBLICATIONS.

Pacifism as promulgated by the religious press promises to be governmentally investigated. The New Reformation, a Chicago publication catering largely to Protestant ministers has lodged complaint with the department of justice against alleged bolshevist activities of the Christian Century, another religious weekly published in Chicago. The editor in chief of the New Reformation, John Clover Monsma, signs the charges against the Christian Century, which he accuses of an attempt to organize the Protestant churches of America into a political combine for seditious purposes.

The report to the government, it is said, strikes at the heart of the entire pacifist movement that has threatened to dominate American Protestantism in the last two or more years, but which seems to have been gradually losing force. Developments coming out of the investigation can scarcely be expected to be starting, though the probe will array well-known clergymen on each side.

Dr. Charles Clayton Morrison is editor of the Christian Century, and he has the editorial assistance of such men as Paul Hutchinson, a leading Methodist, Dr. Herbert L. Willet, Chicago representative of the Federal Council of Churches, Joseph Fort Newton, prominent divine of New York, Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, pastor of the Central Methodist church of Detroit, W. F. Garrison, O. F. Jordan, Alva Taylor, and several others of like standing.

The New Reformation is edited by Dr. Monsma, and on his staff are such men as William Jennings Bryan, Bishop Horace M. Du Bose of the Methodist church, South, Prof. L. S. Keyser, a prominent Lutheran, Dr. Clarence Edward Macartney, moderator of the Presbyterian church, North, Dr. Mark A. Mathews, of Seattle, Prof. L. R. Scarborough, a leading southern Baptist, Dr. John Roach Straton of New York, and others.

In his report filed with the department Dr. Monsma charges the Christian Century with "the advocacy of an organized attempt on the part of the churches to violate the sovereignty of the United States government and to wilfully and premeditatedly obstruct the said government in the fulfillment of its duties." He charges that the Christian Century has repeatedly attacked the country's military institutions; that it has constantly violated the United States constitution; that it is a warm friend of I. W. W. men, and a defender of bolshevism and soviet Russia.

Dr. Monsma tells the government that the Christian Century is urging the churches to engage in a form of militant pacifism and to declare disobedience to the state in case of war, either aggressive or defensive; that the paper wants the churches to enter politics and create a sort of super-government which shall be able to meet the government's "yes" with a determined and effective "no."

Whatever of pacifism there has been in any of the churches, it has not been regarded such as to alarm the United States government, though there has all along been the danger that the Russian soviets and their money—$25,000 a month of which is being spent in this country now—would do their utmost to nurture whatever small seed of pacifism and discontent they should find among the church people in America, with the idea of uniting Christianity with its own opponents in this country in the endeavor to stir up revolution to bring about "the rule of the proletariat" here as it has been brought about in Russia.

The result of the inquiry—if there is to be any result—may well be governmental advice to the editors of these religious publications and their readers to refrain from either disseminating or heeding propaganda against their own government, a government that is giving them happiness and prosperity that may well be contrasted with conditions existing in Russia, under the alleged "rule of the proletariat."

A CHANCE.

One hundred and ten of the 119 men and women placed on probation in Cuyahoga county, O., in 1924 have "gone straight." During the three years in which adult probation has been working in Cleveland, 79 per cent of the cases have completed their probationary terms successfully.

This from a report by James P. Kirby, chief probation officer of common pleas court, Cleveland.

We are learning that man is what he is largely through environment and circumstance. The old adage, "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth," has been the guiding principle for centuries in our treatment of criminals but, fortunately, is being outworn.

Society should show more interest in probation, psychiatric examination and other more refined methods of handling law-breakers.

If for no other reason than the economical one, for, as Kirby remarks, it costs "about one-seventh as much to supervise a person on probation as to keep him in prison."

SPREAD.

More evidence that the wealth of the United States is becoming more and more widely distributed. Stockholders in the basic industries of the country, reports Robert S. Binkard of the Academy of Political Science, New York, have increased three and a half million—in other words, have practically doubled—since 1918.

Binkard's survey, described as the first definite information as to the extent of the increase in popular ownership since the war, shows that of the new shareholders half a million are employees of the firms they have bought into.

And increased employee-ownership is a healthy sign—both for worker and employer.

The Prince of Wales starts on another tour to the far corners of the earth. Already he is the best-traveled royal person in the world. That means, for his purposes, the best educated. The prince is no highbrow. What he knows of books and scholarship is undisclosed, but is doubtless no more than his good form for an English gentleman.

His job, as a modern prince, and later as a modern king, is not with policies and problems. It is to smooth the way with people.

And for that, there is no better training than the contacts and experience of travel. The grandfather of the present prince, without overstepping the limitations of his position, was one of the first diplomats of Europe, smoothing the ways of peace and understanding between nations.

He did it by knowledge of men and skill in dealing with them.

If the training of the young prince can equip him for the same task, in a harder time of the world and a more delicately precarious time for kings, it will be well worth the little it costs.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

THE SLEEPHEADS IN SNOOZER TOW

Pretty soon they found a policeman leaning against a lamppost sound asleep.

Away went the little aeroplane with Mister Whizz, the fairyman and Nancy and Nick, the Twins.

They were starting on an adventure to find the magic snuff. Someone had stolen it from the Fairy Queen's uncle and he hadn't had a good sneeze since Tuesday before last.

"I don't know who stole it exactly," said Mister Whizz, "but I have an idea, that that's almost as good. Snitcher Snatch, the goblin, isn't a thief, but he loves mischief, and in playing tricks he sometimes takes things that don't belong to him."

"Where do you think he has gone?" asked the Twins.

"I have a list of several places," said Mister Whizz. "The first one on the list is Snoozer Town."

"Snoozer Town? Don't you mean Sneezer Town?" asked Nancy.

Mister Whizz laughed. "No, Snoozer Town—it's the place where the Sleepheads live. Of course Snitcher Snatch has the magic snuff, but he doesn't use it. I have no doubt the name of the place will have to be changed to Sneezer Town."

Nancy and Nick sat quite still while the little aeroplane whizzed along through the sky. The little fairy aviator certainly knew how to run it. He made it turn somersaults and bank that means to fly slanting and glide and do tail spins and nose dives and everything an aeroplane knows how to do.

But the Twins never moved. They just held on tight and enjoyed themselves. They knew that the magic shoes were as good as a parachute if anything happened.

Suddenly Mister Whizz shut off his engine and glided down to the earth.

"Here they are!" he said. "Below us is Snoozer Town where the Sleepheads live. We will soon know if Snitcher Snatch is here playing tricks with the magic snuff."

"Why is it called magic snuff?" asked Nancy.

"Oh, my dear, if you ever got a whiff of it you wouldn't ask," cried Mister Whizz. "It is strong enough to blow up a whole town. One grain of it would be enough to make you sneeze your head off nearly. It's like dynamite and T. N. T. rolled into one."

The three travelers climbed out of the aeroplane and started down the main street of Snoozer Town. Pretty soon they saw a policeman leaning against a lamppost sound asleep.

Mister Whizz touched him on the arm. "Beg pardon, sir, but we are looking for a long nosed chap called Snitcher Snatch. Have you seen him?"

"Go and ask Mayor Snoredoodle, second house to the left," said the policeman, and then he went peacefully to sleep again.

The Twins and the fairyman laughed merrily.

If this is the amendment wanted, and if Congress has no power to pass it, the question whether it would be desirable if possible does not even arise.

When a merchant dross sell only one garment of a style in a town; when small purchases have to be specially delivered; when clerks have to spend undue time on "shoppers around" and when everything is charged, prices have to be high.

One educational remedy might be to itemize bills. So much for the garment, and so much more for clerk hire, rent, delivery, bookkeeping and alterations, with a bonus for non-delivery and early-season styles. They are in the bill now. It might be better if they showed.

WETS SHOULD GIVE ISSUE IF WANTING A DEBATE

A representative of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment challenges the Anti-Saloon League to debate the question, "Is it necessary to amend the Volstead act?"

Why not state the question so that there is an issue. Of course it is "necessary to amend the Volstead act." At least, if it is not, this would be the first law that did not need amending in the light of experience.

The real issue is not whether there shall be amendments, but what these amendments shall be. If the anti-suffrage amendment is proposed, and if the other side thinks these amendments undesirable in policy or impossible in law, that question can be debated.

Especially if the proposal is to "permit wine and beer," the constitutional question at once arises.

It is absolutely certain that no law permitting wine of any strength physically possible to make, or beer of normal "pre-war" strength, could pass the supreme court. It would have no choice, under the constitution but to declare such a law invalid.

That depends. Plenty of legislation has been killed which the majority of both houses of Congress and the president thought "meritorious." In a republic, that is the test.

And a lot of things have been killed indirectly by the existence of filibuster, without waiting for its actual exercise. Bills have been compromised, or undersired bills passed, to placate senators threatening obstruction.

Many things have not been brought to a vote at all—most notorious, the Isle of Pines treaty, just passed after waiting 20 years.

The whole operation of the Senate has been clogged with inefficiency, and the prestige of the Senate itself has declined. There would be reasons enough to reform the rules, even if it would be difficult to specify any particular bill killed which we all call "meritorious."

Read Lk. 20:9-18. Text: 20:17. The stone which the builders rejected, the same was made the head of the corner.

MEDITATION—Each one is responsible for making fundamental choices. We cannot be both friendly and selfish, envious and generous, we must be one or the other, and each one must decide for himself.

PRAYER—O God our Father, we are sincerely thankful for Jesus Christ. Let us sense the eternal significance in our daily work and in our opportunities of service to thee and all mankind. Amen.

A mere compromise amounts to nothing in life's great adventure. So with Jesus Christ—we must be either for or against him. Shall we reject the Saviour or make him the pattern of our lives?

"So I must make my choice. Shall I travel north or south, which of the two opposites shall I love? God or the world's evil. Whichever I choose will quench and drive out the love of God it will destroy every worldly passion and the river of my affections will be like the river of the water of life, clear as crystal."

PRAYER—O God our Father, we are sincerely thankful for Jesus Christ. Let us sense the eternal significance in our daily work and in our opportunities of service to thee and all mankind. Amen.

Sublette Man Relates

How Radio Has Helped

H. L. Hatch, Sublette, was among the prominent farmers all over the country whose opinion was quoted over radio recently in a talk broadcast from station WLS by H. C. Biggar, farm and market editor. The Leo county farmer was quoted for his answer in response to the query, "How Have Radio Market Reports Helped You?" Mr. Hatch was quoted in part as follows:

"Your radio market reports have made money for me this winter. I have handled a number of cars of sheep and I always get your reports before I ship."

CHILDLESS HOMES

Read Mrs. Benedict's Letter Praising Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Kewanee, Illinois.—"When I was married about a year and a half I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because of ill health. I did not have any children. I now have two healthy little girls and I am sure I would not have had them had it not been for your medicine. Last spring and summer I got all run-down, irregular, and I had awful headaches, and my back and side hurt me so that I could stay up only a short time. My limbs would get so tired and ache till I could cry. I started to take the Vegetable Compound again and it was not long till I was relieved. Now I do all my own work and help others. I sure praise Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines to any one I meet that is suffering from similar troubles. I think if mothers with girls would give it to them when they come to womanhood it would make them stronger. People who have known me all my life are astonished to see me now as I was always sickly when in my teens and until I started taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. MARY R. BENEDICT, 313 Payson St., Kewanee, Ill.

CAPITALISTS TO "CONTRIBUTE" TO FRENCH FINANCE

Cabinet Agrees on a Plan to Restore Money Balance

Paris, April 7.—(By The Associated Press)—The government's new financial bill, embodying the provisions for the proposed capital levy, or forced loan, was introduced in the Chamber of Deputies today by Finance Minister De Monzie.

The measure was agreed to by the cabinet this morning. He asked its immediate reference to the finance committee and a report on it before the end of the day.

Paris, April 7.—(By The Associated Press)—The cabinet agreed today on details of the capital levy, or forced loan, which will be proposed to the Chamber this afternoon.

The system as explained by the minister of finance is intended to afford French property owners and capitalists a chance to contribute proportionately to their wealth to the renovation of French finances.

It contains provisions obliging them to do so if they refrain from voluntary subscription.

Declarations for income tax will be a basis for obligatory subscriptions to the loan in cases where the capitalists fail to come forward voluntarily.

The principles at the bottom of the whole scheme, said Finance Minister M. De Monzie, "are the maximum of opinion of the part of the capitalists and a minimum of constraint. If a capitalist so desires, he can, previous to his subscription, make a declaration of his fortune, which will make any intervention on the part of the government to ascertain his wealth unnecessary."

Although the government has agreed on the measure and on the plan to raise the limit of the bank bill issue by the Bank of France to forty five billion francs and increasing the limit of the advances by the bank to the state by four billion francs its majority in the chamber is divided. Most of the radical left group will fight both measures.

The first test is expected tonight when the government will demand immediate discussion of the measures.

The socialists will ask for consideration of a counter proposition providing for a straight capital levy of ten percent.

The Bank of France, it was said in official circles, already has exceeded the legal limit of its circulation by more than 1,500,000,000 francs, so that it became imperative to regularize the situation by increasing this limit by law for regulating the financial position of the country which the government will propose to parliament this afternoon.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France Thursday showed a circulation of 96,000,000 francs under a limit of forty one billion francs, but the portfolio bills and acceptances showed a sudden increase of over a billion francs and it is declared this, with other accounts, were used to mask the situation.

Advances To State Big

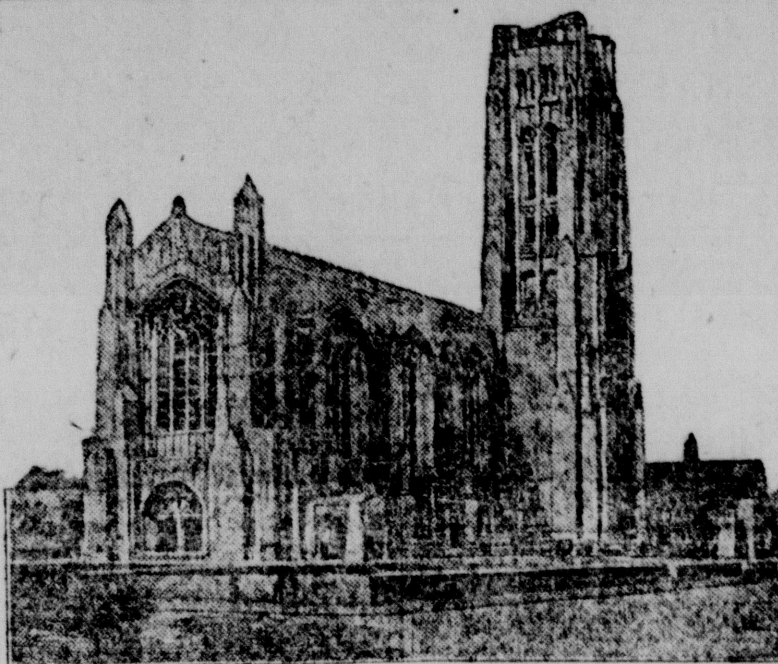

Exactly what are the bank's advances to the state? Not said. They were given last week as 100,000,000 francs under a limit of twenty two billion francs which the government now proposes shall be raised by four billion francs.

The situation has given Governor Reubens of the Bank of France, the gravest concern.

"Confused" and "uncertain" were the words used to describe the political financial situation. Political observers, however, are convinced the administration of Premier Herriot is doomed to disappear.

M. Herriot still seems to retain a certain amount of confidence. Shortly

University of Chicago to Erect Great Gothic Chapel to Seat 2,000

A great Gothic chapel which will dominate the University of Chicago campus is to be erected within the next few months, according to an announcement made recently at the university. The chapel will be part of the great building program which the university is undertaking in 1925 as part of its campaign for $17,500,000, which is being conducted by alumni throughout the country.

The chapel was provided for in the final gift made to the university by John D. Rockefeller and, it is said, is to cost at least $1,500,000. It was designed by the late Bertrand Goodhue, the great master of Gothic architecture; and the plans have been approved by Sir Giles Gilbert Scott, of England, the architect of the great Liverpool cathedral.

The chapel will be architecturally a Gothic cathedral with a nave 41 feet wide, a chancel, a west transept, and opposite it on the east a transeptal tower 200 feet high.

after midnight, after a conference with leaders of his majority groups, he said: "There is no reason to exaggerate the difficulties of the hour."

The government measure, says a semi-official communication issued this morning, were completed by M. De Monzie after an all night session with his experts.

To Increase Circulation

The measures, the communiqué adds are comprised in a single bill. The first part authorizes the Bank of France to increase circulation by four billion francs to a total of forty five billion francs and to raise the limit of the bank's advances to the state from twenty two to twenty six billion francs.

The second part provides for a voluntary ten percent contribution by capital, payable over a period of five years in cash, government securities and even bankable commercial paper with three endorsements.

M. De Monzie's plan in raising the limit of the note issue and at the same time raising the limit of loans from the Bank of France to the treasury is looked upon by many financial experts as a sound measure which can in no way be considered as inflation.

To please some of his supporters Premier Herriot has again modified his views on the Vatican embassy. He agreed last night that the role of the French representative at the Vatican should be limited to the religious question for which France assumed responsibility under the Versailles treaty and which concern Alsace, Lorraine, Togo Land and Cameroon.

By Associated Press Leased Wire

Buffalo, April 7.—The 25th annual international championship tournament of the American Bowling Association Congress with a record entry of 2200 five man teams failed to produce any record scores. Clarence Long's score of 1977 pins which won the all events championship was the only one to beat the winning mark of last year, this by two pins.

Buffalo carried off two championship ships this year. Clarence Long, all events winner, a member of the Wells-Rice Blue Ribbons took first prize in the five man event with 3023 pins. The other two championships doubles and singles were won by Chicago bowlers. Edward Schupp and Edward Karich with 1318 in the two man

Three Boxing Matches in N. Y. This Quarter

By Associated Press Leased Wire

New York, April 7.—Arrangements for three championship boxing bouts within the next three months in New York may be completed by promoters today.

Contracts for one of the matches have already been signed and approval of the state athletic commission is expected today. This bout, barring unforeseen difficulties will bring together Gene Tunney, American light heavyweight champion and Tom Gibbons at the Polo Grounds June 12.

A second title tangle involves the eligibility of Mickey Walker, world welterweight champion. Matchmaker Fugazy seeks a match between Walker and Harry Greb, middleweight titleholder at the Polo Grounds, June 12. Walker's suspension for failure to box Dave Shadle at the behest of the commission and the board's order prohibiting promoters from negotiating with fighters under ban, are obstacles.

A third title tilt has for principals

American and French featherweight champions.

OLDER BOYS, LEE AND WHITESIDE TO MEET IN THIS CITY

Conference to be Held in Presbyterian Church Friday, Saturday

This week every church in Dixon is placing special stress on Easter and all it carries with it in Passion Week. The Young Men's Christian Association as its share is promoting an Older Boys Conference for Friday and Saturday. Lee and Whiteside counties are uniting this year and it is expected about 75 delegates will come in from our neighboring county.

The purpose of this conference is to draw together the older boys of Lee and Whiteside counties to consider live character building topics and to face the big issues that make for virile, strong young manhood. After the State Older Boys' Conference last year in more than thirty centers in Illinois, there were held these county or sectional get-togethers in which the Older Boys played the biggest part. In the Dixon conference there will be an attempt to face the problems of school, athletics, church and home.

The main emphasis is of course, always on the home life as the important factor in the life of the people of the country. Next to the home stands the church with all the auxiliaries, and the school. Better homes, better churches, better Y. M. C. A.'s and better schools. Mean a better country, but homes, churches and church auxiliaries, and schools, without the inculcation of a high standard of morals and patriotism mean have to society.

These older boys are coming to Dixon to study some of the problems that confront them, and be encouraged in their quest of higher ideals, better morals and better living. They will arrive Friday about 4 p. m. and it is Dixon's privilege to extend its hospitality at this time to these virile potential young Americans. Several homes are still needed to billet these guests for Friday night and Saturday breakfast, and it will be appreciated if anyone having a room will phone the Y. M. C. A.

The sessions to which the public is invited will be held in the Presbyterian church on Friday afternoon and Saturday all day. The complete program will appear in this paper later in the week.

BARRE, SON OF KAZAN by James Oliver Curwood A LOVE EPIC OF THE FAR NORTH

Copyright, 1917, by Doubleday, Page & Co.
"BARRE, SON OF KAZAN," a Vitaphone Picture, with Wolf, the War Dog, is an Adaptation of This Story

SYNOPSIS

Barre, the wolf-dog, and McTaggart, the trapper, were at war. Enemies of old, each now devoted himself to making his unseen enemy as miserable as possible. Barre continued to strip McTaggart's game-traps of their food, instinctively avoiding the poison which the treacherous man brags spread for him. Then McTaggart placed deadly wolf-traps through which the dog would have to reach to procure his bait.

CHAPTER XXVI—Continued

Seven inches of snow fell that night, and the whole world seemed turned into a wonderful white robe. Like billows of feathers the snow hung to the trees and shrubs; it gave tall white caps to the rocks, and underfoot it was so light that a cartridge dropped from the hand sank to the bottom of it. Barre was on the trap-line early. He was more cautious this morning, for there was no longer the scent or snowshoe track of McTaggart to guide him. He struck the first trap about halfway between Lac Bain and the shack in which the Factor was waiting. It was sprung, and there was no bait. Trap after trap he visited, and all of them he found sprung, and all without bait. He sniffed the air suspiciously, striving vainly to catch the tang of smoke, a whiff of the man-smell. Along toward noon he came to the "nest"—the twelve treacherous traps waiting for him with gaping jaws half a foot under the blanket of snow. For a full minute he stood well outside the danger line, sniffing the air, and listening. He saw the rabbit, and his jaws closed with a hungry click. He moved a step nearer. Still he was suspicious—

"When he saw McTaggart he made a lunge to his feet, almost instantly."

for some strange and inexplicable reason he sensed danger. Anxious to be sought for it with his nose, his eyes, and his ears. And all about him there was a great silence and a great peace. His jaws clicked again. He whined softly. What was it stirring him? Where was the danger he could neither see nor smell? Slowly he circled about the trap-house; three times he circled round it, each circle drawing him a little nearer—until at last his feet almost touched the outer cord of traps. Another minute he stood still; his ears flattened; in spite of the rich aroma of the rabbit in his nostrils some thing was drawing him away. In another moment he would have gone, but there came suddenly—from directly behind the trap-house—a fierce little rat-like squeak, and the next instant Barre saw an ermine whiter than the snow tearing hungrily at the flesh of the rabbit. He forgot his strange premonition of danger. He growled fiercely, but his plucky little rival did not budge from his feast. And then he sprang straight into the "nest" that Bush McTaggart had made for him.

CHAPTER XXVII

The next morning Bush McTaggart heard the clanking of a chain when he was still a good quarter of a mile from the "nest." Was it a lynx? Was it a fisher-cat? Was it a wolf or a fox? Or was it Barre? He half ran the rest of the distance, and at last he came to where he could see, and his heart leaped into his throat when he saw he had caught his enemy. He approached, holding his rifle ready to fire if by any chance the dog should free himself.

Barre lay on his side, panting from exhaustion and quivering with pain. A hoarse cry of exultation burst from McTaggart's lips as he drew nearer and looked at the snow. It was packed hard for many feet about the trap-house, where Barre had struggled, and it was red with blood. The blood had come mostly from Barre's jaws. They were dripping now as he stared at his enemy. The sign was hidden under the snow had done their merciless work well. One of his forefeet was caught well up toward the first joint; both hind feet were caught, a fourth trap had closed on his flank and in tearing the jaws loose he had pulled off a patch of skin half as big as McTaggart's hand. The snow told the story of his desperate fight all through the night; his bleeding jaws showed how vainly he had tried to break the imprisoning steel with his teeth. He was panting. His eyes were bloodshot. But even now, after all his hours of agony, neither his spirit nor his courage was broken. When he saw McTaggart he made a lunge to his feet, almost instantly crumpling down into the snow again. But his forefeet were braced. His head and chest remained up, and the snarl that came from his throat was tigerish in its ferocity. Here at last—not more than a dozen feet from him—was the one thing in all the world that he hated more than he hated the wolf breed. And again he was helpless, as he was helpless that other time in the rabbit snare.

The fierceness of his snarl did not disturb Bush McTaggart now. He saw now utterly the other was at his mercy, and with an exultant laugh he leaned his rifle against a tree, pulled off his mittens, and began loading his pipe. This was the triumph he had looked forward to, the torture he had waited for. In his soul there was a hatred as deadly as Barre's, the hatred that a man might have for a man. He had expected to send a bullet through the dog. But this was better—watch him dying by inches, to taunt him as he would have taunted a human, to walk about him so that he could hear the clank of the traps and see the fresh blood drip as Barre twisted his tortured legs and body to keep facing him. It was a splendid vengeance. He was so engrossed in it that he did not hear the approach of snowshoes behind him. It was a voice—a man's voice—that turned him round suddenly.

The man was a stranger, and he was younger than McTaggart by ten years. At least he looked no more than thirty-five or six, even with the short growth of blond beard he wore. He was of that sort that the average man would like at a glance; boyish, and yet a man; with clear eyes that looked out frankly from under the rim of his fur cap, a form lithe as an Indian's, and a face altogether that did not bear the hard lines of the wilderness. Yet McTaggart knew before he had spoken that this man was of the wilder west, that he was heart and soul a part of it. His cap was fisher skin. He wore a windproof coat of softly tanned caribou skin, belted at the waist with a long sash, and Indian fringed. The inside of the coat was furred. He was traveling on the long, slender bush country snowshoes; his pack strapped over the shoulders, was small and compact; he was carrying his rifle in a cloth jacket. And from cap to snowshoes he was a travel-worn. McTaggart, at a guess, would have said he had travelled a thousand miles in the last few weeks. It was not this thought that sent the strange and chilling fear up his back, but the sudden fear that in some strange way a whisper of the truth might have found its way down into the south—the truth of what had happened on the Gray Loon—and that this travel-worn stranger wore under his caribou skin coat the badge of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. For that instant it was almost a terror that possessed him, and he stood mute.

The stranger had uttered only an amazed exclamation before. Now he said, with his eyes on Barre: "God save us, but you've got the poor devil in a right proper mess, haven't you?"

There was something in the voice that reassured McTaggart. It was not a suspicious voice, and he saw that the stranger was more interested in the captured animal than in himself. He drew a deep breath.

"A trap robber," he said.

The stranger was staring still more closely at Barre. He thrust his gun stock downward in the snow and drew nearer to him.

"God save us again—a dog!" he exclaimed.

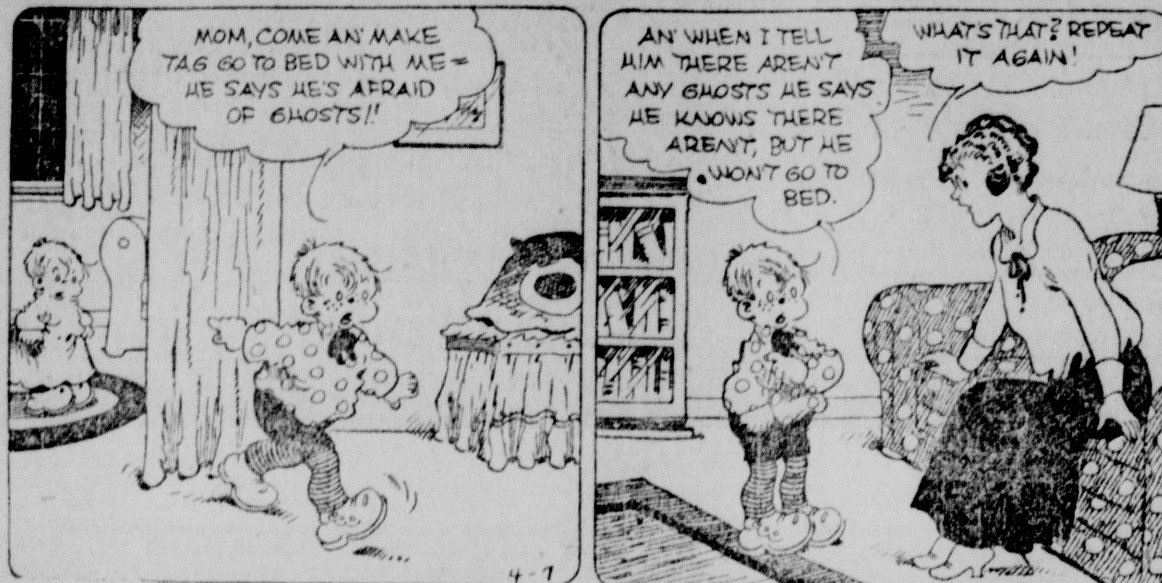

From behind, McTaggart was watching the man with the eyes of a ferret.

"Yes, a dog," he answered. "A wild dog, half wolf at least. He's robbed me of a thousand dollars' worth of fur this winter."

The stranger squatted himself before Barre, with his mittened hands resting on his knees, and his white teeth gleaming in a half smile.

"You poor devil!" he said sympathetically. "So you're a trap robber, eh? An outlaw! And the Police have got you! And—God save us once more—they haven't played you a very square game!"

Illinois Legion is Out for New Record

Bloomington—With memberships for 1925 already 1600 above the mark set on the same date last year, Illinois Legionnaires are preparing for a final drive this month to surpass last year's total and win their membership contest with New York and Pennsylvania. The Illinois department recently numbered 24,024 members, 1,593 more than were on the rolls at the same time last year.

This figure gives Illinois a lead of 1,339 members over New York, but Pennsylvania is still 2,222 members in the lead. The greatest membership drive of the year will close April 15 and results of the drive and of the contests will be radio-cast from station WMAQ, April 16.

The increase in Illinois is due largely to the activities of downstate posts, although Chicago posts are numbered among the ten largest in the state. Bloomington with 700 members leads all posts. Rockford is fourth, Kankakee sixth and Springfield tenth. Downstate posts have increased their percentage of membership greatly in the last year. Letroy has four times as many members as it had last year while O'Fallon, Sparta, DeLand, McHenry, Equality, Bement and Westmont have each at least tripled their membership. The Captain Kelly post of Chicago has added 239 per cent to its roster and the Marine post of Chicago has increased 228 percent.

The WELL DRESSED MAN By BEAUNASH Correct Clothes To Meet The Obligation Of Every Situation

Its Grip Won't Slip

To declare that the golfer's feet are always on his mind may be a questionable joke, but it is an unquestionable truth. In Scotland, which disputes with Holland the distinction of being the cradle of the "golf and game," it is proverbial that before you look to your stance and swing, you must look to your shoes. In view of the worldwide devotion to, yes, almost the passion, for golf today, it is difficult to believe that the Scottish Parliament ordained in 1847 that "golf be utterly cryt down and nocht usit." It was denounced as one of the "unprofitable sports" and "pains and penalties" were named for engaging in it. Ever since the game began to crowd racing as the king of sports and the sport of kings, designers have endeavored their wits to produce shoes that would be appropriate, comfortable and proof against slipping. Many admirable types are to be seen, for the right shoe is just as important as the weight, length and lie of one's club. Of all the various sorts, that which has gained, perhaps, the widest favor is the golf shoe having a sole and heel of what is known as English crepe rubber.

This is a composition substance tougher and springier than rubber alone. It grips the ground fixedly and, virtually, cannot slip. It lends what the golfer terms stance, the attitude assumed when making a stroke. It is long-lasting, water-proof and not prone to irritate or overheat the foot. The English crepe rubber sole shoe is not, of course, the only practical one for the game, but it has been accepted as the nearest approach to the perfect golf shoe, because it has the grip that won't slip.

Golf shoes must be kept in prime condition when off the feet, or they will not give satisfactory service. Not in use, they should be thoroughly wiped to remove dirt and then "treed" over a wooden last or form. Do not put wet shoes next to a stove or radiator. That causes them to become stiff and rough and makes them crack. Dry them in the open air, for leather, to last and remain soft and resilient, must absorb moisture. Occasionally, rub a little oil on.

The Blucher type of golf shoe, shown here, is reviving in favor, because it has a more rugged, sportsmanlike look than the conventional plain pattern. Leather thongs are preferable to cloth laces. Do not fasten your shoe tightly. This binds the instep. See that it is roomy enough to permit of being laced loosely. Hobnails or screw calks upon the soles are not as much in use as formerly, because, in the first place, they wear the turf and, secondly, they have become unnecessary.

Sixty-five Bullets in Body of "Bank Robber"

Chicago, April 6.—A bank robber in effigy was shot full of holes by Franklin County bankers and sheriffs men at a meeting in Benton Saturday night.

Today, the rather gawky sight, a wooden form built to resemble a human body and clothed in a brown suit, cap and mask, was received at the headquarters of the Illinois Bankers Association which is organizing the bankers of Illinois to resist and kill bank robbers. The Benton bankers endorsed the town guard plan by which each town arms several men who act as deputy sheriffs in guarding the banks against attack.

As a test of the Franklin County Men's marksmanship the effigy was found to contain 65 bullet holes.

SIR DUDLEY GLENISTER, believed to be the murderer of James Glenister to obtain his title and estate, is rendered unconscious in a fire while—

KATHLEEN GLENISTER, sister of the dead man, continues to believe him guilty, but—

JAMES WRAGGE, Scotland Yard detective, assigned to the murder case, has fastened the guilt upon Stephen Colne, former cabinet minister. Wragge explains—

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
"Mr. Colne gave it to me," replied Wragge. "He has throughout my conduct of the inquiry been extremely anxious to have Sir Dudley convicted for the murder of Mr. George Glenister."

"And he has probably lost his life from loyalty to that belief," Kathleen exclaimed.

Doctor Wheatley came into the room to give an account of his patient. The baronet was in a bad way. Two ribs were broken and he had sustained terrible injuries from the fire. So far there was no reason why he should not eventually recover, but what Wheatley mostly feared was the shock to his nervous system. When he came back to consciousness he would probably be out of his mind. The doctor was of the opinion that a specialist in mental disease should be sent for.

Kathleen agreed cordially. "You cannot hang a lunatic," she said. "We must have a specialist as soon as we can. Willoughby Melville is the man. He knows us all and has attended him before."

"I'll get him on the 'phone," said Norman, rising and leaving the room.

He was back again in a minute or two with the announcement that Doctor Melville would be at the Grange by ten o'clock next morning. He had had a busy day and could not come out that night. He said that he could be of little use till Dudley recovered consciousness.

"He wanted to be informed if you were here, Mr. Wragge," Norman added. "He expressed pleasure on my telling him that you were."

"There is no man in the profession I would rather meet in consultation," said Doctor Wheatley, with the genuine warmth of a hero-worshiper. "Melville is not only a great physician. He is a psychologist of the very first order. Had his lot been cast on a lower plane he would probably have made a fortune as a thought reader or a speak medium."

Wragge laughed grimly. "And if," he said, "Doctor Melville had lived on a still lower plane he might have been drawing six pounds a week as a detective inspector at Scotland Yard and earning every penny of it. If my hat was on my head I would take it off for Doctor Willoughby Melville. He has been the real detective in this case. Without his wise direction I should never have solved it, but should in due course have gone to my grave believing that Sir Dudley Glenister killed his cousin."

CHAPTER XXVIII
The Blind Trail

THE alliance in the stately dining room of Breachwood Grange was pregnant with the elements of storm after Inspector Wragge had paid his glowing tribute to Willoughby Melville. "You are speaking as if even now you were determined to turn a blind eye to Dudley Glenister's guilt," said Kathleen with ominous calm.

"Sometimes a blind eye is a useful adjunct on a blind trail," replied Wragge. "If my eye had not been blind I might have stumbled into greater mistakes than those I was making till Doctor Melville set me right. How he gained the knowledge that enabled him to do so is beyond me. It is his secret and I must leave it to be divulged by him if he so chooses. But, with your permission, Miss Glenister, I should like to give you here and now the true history of your brother's death as it can be proved by a chain of irrefutable evidence."

"You are never likely to have a better opportunity," said Kathleen coldly. "Let us have it, anyway."

"Just to show you what it all leads to I had better begin at the end," Wragge smiled at the indignant girl. "The blind trail led to your wretched kinsman, lying maimed and burned upstairs. The true trail, illumined by Melville, led to the Grange. I set to work on the case without delay, and the same afternoon, during a call I paid here at the Grange, Wragge smiled at the indignant girl. "The blind trail led to your wretched kinsman, lying maimed and burned upstairs. The true trail, illumined assistance from Scotland Yard, and he privately hinted to the chief of the C. I. D. that I should be assigned to the case. He also telegraphed to me from Colnbrook Towers that I should see him there before I got busy. I went down at once, disguised as a subscription-hunting clergyman, and I learned in the first five minutes of our interview that what he wanted was to get Sir Dudley Glenister convicted for his cousin's murder.

"I broke down at the start," continued Wragge, looking round at the rap faces of his audience wistfully. "I cannot altogether blame myself. From previous experience I was tolerably sure that Mr. Colne had an ax of his own to grind, but I thought his motive was political. And my reading of the reports of the affair had swayed the mind toward the probable guilt of Sir Dudley. Mr. Colne's private moral character never entered into my speculations.

"At that interview there occurred a little

New York—Who gets the fashions for men in America? We have no Prince of Wales and the movie heroes such as Valentino, have little influence any more. I went to a whole sale clothier in search of information on the subject.

Three classes of men set the styles, he told me.

"We watch the college boy to see what new things he brings to the campus," the clothier told me. "We watch the big business men of Wall Street, and we watch the vaudeville performers."

"More styles for young men originate at Princeton and Yale than at any other place. Last fall we had two 'spotters' at Princeton. They saw three men wearing yellow corduroy knickerbockers. Now young men are wearing yellow corduroys all over the country. Boys in high school and young fellows in town copy the clothes college boys wear when they go home on vacation."

"We watch for the return of such men as Tom Lant, Jesse Livermore and other brokers from Palm Beach or Europe. We know what they wear will affect the styles of men in lower position in Wall Street and that these styles will go into all classes."

"Vaudeville performers are wont to create new and bizarre fashions. Of course, the things they bring out are too extreme to be modified the ideas and thus get our styles for the sporty young men."

Women's styles are created mostly in smart shops that are up in Fifth Avenue district or in Paris. Within 24 hours of a new dress being put in the window of an exclusive shop it is being copied by manufacturers of cheaper dresses. It is a common sight to see men from clothing houses copying women's dresses and wraps on Fifth Avenue. I even have seen them doing it in the theater district at night. Thus a woman who pays $80 to $150 for a dress because it is the only one of its cut and trim in existence may see replicas of it in cheaper material at $15 a few weeks later. Several of the exclusive shops will not sell goods on approval because they sometimes fall into the hands of professional designers who use the dress or wrap for a pattern and then return it, thus being able to get the cheap copy on the market before the original is sold.

The first cable thrown ashore when the Leviathan docks here contains a telephone line which is plugged into exchange connection. Thus home-bound passengers can talk to friends anywhere reached by the 16 million telephones in North America before the boat is docked. They can call up their business offices or make hotel reservations.

Don't believe that New York is entirely heartless. Consider the case of Richard Walsh, a white-haired old man of 72, who collected $25.78 in five minutes in a Seventh Avenue subway. After he was sentenced to six months in the work house because it was his eighth conviction for begging, he told the police it was a poor week in which he hadn't been able to collect more than $200. I have seen this old fellow collect as much as three or

New York—See-sawing up and down Broadway I saw Laura Hope Crews, the actress lady, and she tells me she's packing up to go to the coast to play stock 20 weeks this summer. Yet they say stage folk have an easy time. Saw Gloria Swanson and her new husband, the Marquis of something or other, and a handsome devil he is. He would screen like a million dollars, as the saying is.

Saw Jim Barton who is now doing his stuff in vaudeville without his black-face make-up and tap shoes. He gains new distinction as a funny man.

Saw the new Albee Theater in Brooklyn and certainly it is the most gorgeous theater in the east, if not in the entire country. Liked especially the many fine paintings and tapestries in the lobby promenades.

Saw Schumann-Heink and always I think of her as just having laid aside her apron and wiped the soap suds off her hands.

Saw Ruth St. Denis, slender as a willow, although I think that a poet simile for a willow is no slenderer than other trees.

Saw Lupino Lane, the sad-faced comedian. Saw Holbrook Blinn, the bad man of the stage, looking like a good-natured sport as he strolled along Broadway.

Saw Rachmaninoff, who looks more like a broken-down editor than a pianist. Saw Elsie Janis whose face always reminds me of a saucy sparrow. Saw Herman Gant, the newest producer on the stage line, in great good spirit because of the success of 'Hell's Bells', but even had his show been a flop I would have found him smiling and planning for another.

Saw Eddie Dowling back among the bright lights with 'Sadie, Irene and Mary' after many months on the road. Saw George Arliss who has one of the most interesting faces I have ever seen.

Some men never outgrow their boyhood habits. The other day I saw Basil Caparelli, head of a news picture syndicate, picking up rubber bands on the street. He stuffed them in his left hip pocket. I asked him why he did it. He pulled out a double handful of rubber bands and told me that he had begun to save them when a boy and that he always has his pocket full, changing them as he changes his trousers.

Here's just another little story of hidden genius finally being brought to light, no different than many such stories here. Archie Sinclair's paintings have been exhibited by the Civic Club and leading artists are taking keen interest in his work. He came to New York three years ago, working his way from Portland, Ore., as a stoker on a ship. Since then he has painted floors by day and painted his canvasses by night. His home has been in an alley room.

Power in the Blood!

You will be compelled to admit that the results of S. S. S. are really amazing!

MAN'S GLORY is his strength—yet how few there are who are really as strong as they should be. The blood thins, gets weaker, blood cells wear out—general weakness and a gradual breakdown of the system results.

But have you ever actually taken advantage of this wonderful fact? Thousands just like you have never thought of it. So-called skin eruptions—pimples, boils, blackheads, eczema all pack up and go when the tide of blood cells begins to roll in. Blood cells are the fighting giants of Nature. S.S.S. is one of the greatest blood cell builders, blood cleansers and body builders, known to us mortals. Here is your opportunity! S.S.S. contains only vegetable medicinal ingredients.
